S IXTY YEARS AGO Her Majesty Queen Victoria ascended the throne of England, as next of heir to her uncle, William IV., her immediate royal predecessor. This year the Queen celebrates not only her diamond jubilee, but also the longest reign in English history; a reign without parallel in the advancement in science, the development of education, the increase of religious tolerance and the betterment of humanity generally. When the young daughter of the Duke of Kent was called to the throne, the United Kingdom had a population of barely twenty-five millions; to-day forty million souls occupy the same territory. During her reign Great Britain has enlarged her possessions by one-sixth, and the Queen is the proud and happy ruler of a population of 500,000,000. The United States has grown from a population of 17,000,000 to a population of 70,000,000. The days of the accession of the Queen were days when public schools were scarcely known; ignorance among the lower classes was almost universal; books were few in number, and costly; travel on land and water was slow and tedious, and attended often with great danger; the electric telegraph and telephone were not dreamed of; and even the carrying of mail by the Government was only being formulated in theory, and was regarded by the financiers and political economists of the day as a rash movement, and only likely to be fraught with unsurmountable obstacles. To-day the Government of England, the English Colonies, and the United States spend millions of dollars on education; public schools are seen in every city, town and village; even in the remote backwoods settlement and the embryo diggings of the miner. Not only the common school education received an impetus unprecedented in the annals of history, but the higher education, the education of the high school, the academy and the college has relatively advanced with equally as great strides. Electricity, then in swaddling clothes, encumbered by false theories, and still more detrimental prejudices, has grown into lusty youth. Electric lights, electric telegraph, and telephone, electric power, all belong to the Victorian era. Chemists have discovered new elements through the great power of the spectroscope, and during the past sixty years twenty-four elements have been added to the yet incomplete list—until the number of simple substances are now seventy-eight. The refractory power of the lens has been almost perfected, and the ancient science of astronomy cultivated by the Egyptians and Chaldeans has made more progress during this period than in centuries past. The stage coach, that great English institution, lauded by De Quincey, has passed away; the whistle of the locomotive is heard in its stead. Sailing vessels no longer fly their white wings to ocean breezes; or, rather, the sails are becoming fewer and fewer. Relegated to the office of carriers of freight, they are now being superseded by the smoke stack of the steamboat. Canals cut the United Kingdom as a network; they overcome cataracts and waterfalls on the American continent, and unite ocean to ocean in Europe and Asia.

* * * * *

Slavery existed the world over; emancipation not being proclaimed upon British soil till two years after the accession of the Queen, to be followed by emancipation by France and the South American Republics, and later by Russia and the United States—the latter after the bloody war between the North and the South. The condition of the working classes is infinitely superior to what it used to be; they are fed, housed and clothed better. Although there still exists great poverty and misery, there are benevolent societies and individuals who are fighting the battle of the poor man, and the intelligent exercise of the franchise has placed a weapon in his hands that, properly used, cannot fail to aid him in his social upraising.

* * * * *

Apart from the social, political and scientific questions, the reign of the Queen will always be revered by Englishmen. She has been a monarch well-beloved of her subjects; of simple habits; fondly attached to her children from their infancy, and has lived to see them grow up into manhood and womanhood, and her children's children become men and women, and to hold in her aged arms her great grandchildren—the heirs apparent of the throne, which she has graced for sixty long years. At her jubilee the hearts of Englishmen will go forth in renewed praise when singing the national anthem, and from the North to the South, the East to the West, girdling the broad expanse of land and water of the globe, the words, "God Save Our Glorious Queen," will re-echo as never before they have re-echoed, thanks to God that He was pleased to place so noble a monarch on the throne of England, and praise to the monarch for her queenly and womanly virtues. The celebration of the jubilee will take place everywhere where Englishmen and descendants of Englishmen are found; upon British soil and in the land of foreigners, and the celebration at Victoria—a city named after the Queen—will extend from June 20th (Sunday), to June 23rd, the following Wednesday. The programme of events to take place are contained in the following pages, and are as complete as it is possible to make them, and the city will be in general fete; merchants and private citizens vying one with another in the decoration of the places of business and private residences, and one and all extending to visiting Britishers and to cousins in blood—the citizens of the great American Republic—that whole and open-hearted welcome characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon peoples.

* * * * *

For the convenience of visitors to the city there has been published a complete list of officers and committees of the celebration, who will be found at all times ready to give any required information, and to do all in their power to make the visit of strangers to the capital City of Victoria as pleasant and cheerful as possible.

$1,000 REWARD

FOUR POINT BEARINGS have not been discarded by the leading bicycle manufacturer of Canada. They continue to use the E. & D. kind.

It is amusing to read the ads of our competitors, and observe how, in their frantic endeavours to push their wheels to the front and to stem as far as possible the increasing demand for the

E. & D.

bicycle, they have resorted to falsehood regarding the Four Point Bearing as used by us in our wheel. Talking through newspapers costs money, and in order to give those who talk the loudest about us a chance to earn enough to pay for their "ravings" we hereby offer of the assertions they make about the Evans & Dodge Four Point Bearings.

$1,000 For Proof

FIRST—$250.00

To any one who can prove that the E. & D. Four Point Bearing was ever used in any Bicycle previous to its introduction by ourselves in 1895.

SECOND—$250.00

To any person who can prove that the E. & D. Four Point Bearing was ever discarded by a bicycle firm in England or elsewhere.

THIRD—$250.00

For proof that any other bicycle bearing will last as long without wear as the E. & D. Four Point kind.

FOURTH—$250.00

For proof that the claims made for E. & D. Bearing are not absolutely correct.

ROMANCE OF THE "CARNIVAL OF MADRID."

The event of the story of the "Carnival of Madrid," which has been handed down through receding generations, transpired through the close of the sixteenth century. The scene opens at the Castle Royal, near the City of Madrid in Spain. Don de Pareja, the owner and occupant of the castle, is the last descendant of an ancient and honored family, noted for their austerity and tyrannical decisions in public affairs, and a man cordially hated and feared. He was at this time the Alcalde, or Mayor, of the commune, and also President of the House of Deputies. About a fortnight antecedent the eventful night of the "Carnival of Madrid," he had sentenced to death four Spanish soldiers for a trifling offense committed to the district of Navarre. The sentence was based on an illegitimate and entirely ex parte proceeding, secretly held in the Chamber of the Cortes, where the prisoners had been denied even a hearing—all instigated by the infamous Pareja, the President. The people of the entire province became so incensed and outspoken in their denunciation of the cruel sentence, that the cowardly Pareja quailed and commuted the sentence for five days; at the end of which time the entire populace appealed to him to pardon the condemned, but in vain, for upon the afternoon of the day fixed in his decree for the execution it took place in the public square of Madrid, where the poor fellows met their death bravely, amidst the lamentations of the whole people. Instead of four victims, however, there were only three brave soldiers who gave up their lives to satisfy the wicked mandate of the tyrant. The missing one was Ferdinand Castrella, a soldier of wonderful bravery and the idol of his comrades, who on the night preceding the day assigned for the execution, single-handed, throttled the guard and escaped from the galleys of Malaga, where he had been chained to his seat awaiting execution. He fled to Madrid, remained in hiding several days, and in disguise witnessed the cruel execution of his beloved comrades. The cruelties that had been imposed on him and the horrible sight that he had witnessed so fired his intrepid heart that he swore vengeance on Don de Pareja, and at once set about its consummation. Craftily communicating with them, he soon called together several of his comrades from Navarre and formed a secret order, each member bound by oath to avenge their brothers' deaths. It was agreed to resort to bombs, and in this manner to slay Pareja and destroy his castle. They selected as the night of his destruction the evening upon which Don de Pareja was to give in marriage the hand of his lovely niece, the Princess Savedra, to a wealthy duke of an adjoining province. To appropriately celebrate the event, Don de Pareja had arranged for a carnival within the spacious ground adjacent to the castle, and spared nothing in his endeavors to secure for the proud event the rarest attractions to be found in all the realm. But instead of an evening of merriment, it proved to be one of disaster. As soon as the sports and pastimes were concluded, and the bridal party had retired to the salon of the castle, Ferdinand and his band of conspirators appeared at the entrance of the castle. Three bombs were secretly conveyed into the castle and carefully placed, and as they are about to explode Ferdinand is seen rapidly fleeing from the doomed castle, bearing gallantly the lovely Savedra in his arms, whom he has seized and borne away under the very eyes of her new husband and stern uncle. As Ferdinand and Savedra make their escape by boat across the lake, and his companions reach the woods close at hand in safety, there is a frightful explosion; the timbers crash amidst the falling walls and roof of the castle, and wicked Pareja dies a miserable death.

"VICTORIA, THE GREAT."

A Tribute in Verse by the Poet Laureate of Great Britain.

The dew was on the summer lawn,
The roses bloomed, the woods were green,
When forth there came, as fresh as dawn,
A maiden with majestic mien.

They girt a crown about her brow,
They placed a sceptre in her hand,
And loud rang out a nation's vow:
God guard the lady of the land.

And now the cuckoo calls once more,
And once again June's roses blow;
And round her throne her people pour,
Recalling sixty years ago.

And all the goodly days between,
Glory and sorrow, love and pain,
The wifely mother, widowed Queen,
The loftiest and the longest reign.

She shared her subjects' bane and bliss,
Welcomed the wise, the base withstood,
And taught by her clear life it is
The greatest greatness to be good.

Yet, while for peace she wrought and prayed
She bore the trident, wore the helm,
And, mistress of the main, she made
An Empire of her island realm.

So gathering now, from near, from far,
From rule whereon ne'er sets the day,
From Southern cross and Northern star,
Her people lift their hearts and pray:

Longer and longer may she reign,
And through a summer night serene,
Whence day doth never wholly wane,
God spare and bless our Empress Queen.
